EDITORIAL BRIEFS.

It is thought that this week will decide who is going to be President in this country.

Of course the President is serene and free from bitterness. A man with the whole American people on his side has no cause for agitation.

It is a great deal better for the party to have its final wrestle with Bossism now than to wait till 1884. Let the battle be faught now, squarely, and to the end. Then we'll know what is what.

An eye-witness says Jefferson Davis stood on tip-toe and brought down his upraised arm vehemently when he declared the other day that he believed the lost cause was "founded in truth and justice." The old gentleman should endeavor to be calm. The lost cause is so dead that neither dancing nor pounding can resurrect it.

Jefferson Davis comes to the surface with the observation that "it is a narrow and weak policy that endeavors to perpetuate the Union of States begging the question of their sovereignty." It will be observed that Jeff is the same old sixpence. He has the State Sovereignty trouble very hard, and it will probably die with him.

The President is said to be in receipt of one hundred letters a day, more or less, urging him to stand firm. If all those Republicans who cherish the same hope were to express their sentiments in the same manner, the contents of the President's mail-bag would indicate within a little time the numerical strength of the Republican party.

The persecution of the Jews in Russia by mob violence is something for which the Russian government cannot be held responsible. But in all the countries of eastern Europe and southwestern Asia, the Jews are found in such numbers that the antagonism of races, religions and castes are fiercely stimulated in thousands of ways that cannot possibly be understood in this country.

The President said to a Senator the other day that recognized fully the Senate's constitutional right to reject every nomination he makes, and if the Senators should reject every one for reasons which appear sufficient to them, he would not complain. But he did object to the dilly-dally policy by which nominations of great importance were hung up and neither confirmed nor rejected. That is where the whole country agrees with him.

The tone of the Italian government on the subject of the French invasion of Tunis, as developed in the Italian Parliament, seems to indicate that some secret understanding must exist between the Berlin Treaty Powers on this subject, such as was indicated by Mr. Waddington, in his allegation of a secret treaty between England and France. If such a treaty exists, it must have been formed with the knowledge of Prince Bismarck, who is said to have suggested North Africa as an outlet for French ambition.

It was a narrow escape, but for all practical purposes a majority of one is as good as a majority of a hundred, and that is why Mr. Stanley Matthews will take his seat upon the bench of the Supreme Court of the United States. In view of the vote cast by the Judiciary Committee, the result is a surprise, and a surprise which will, we believe be unwelcome to the country. Mr. Matthews' brilliant ability is not, however, to be questioned, and it rests with himself to stultify the many despording anticipations which his nomination elicited.

A Great Achievement.

Beyond question, says the New York Tribune, the plan of Secretary Windom, which culminated last week is a magnificent success. It is not yet known how large a portion of the out-standing six per cents has been forwarded with requests for continuance. The applications have recently been far beyond the clerical ability of the Department to open packages, count and record the bonds and enter the proper orders, and several hundred packages of bonds with accompanying requests for continuance are now at the treasury awaiting examination. As it is probable that many of the latest applications are from banks, and therefore for an amount larger than is usually held by private investors, the prospect is that the amount finally brought within the term of the call will be larger than present reports indicate. The foreign holders are yet to be heard from, and, moreover, it is announced in Washington dispatches that Secretary Windom has extended the time for applications, being satisfied that the public interests can be served thereby. Certainly no private interest can be injuriously affected by such a change. Those who have secured an extension of their loans at 3 per cent have done so in the belief that nearly the whole of the outstanding sixes would be thus extended, and it can do no harm to them to have the amount of three and a half per cents slightly increased. The Government can only gain by an extention of time, if, as is probable, many holders of the six per cents have failed to forward their requests for continuance only because of defective or tardy information.

Whether this be so or not, it is now certain that nearly the whole of the six per cent debt has been extended at the request of holders to bear 3½ per cent interest during the pleasure of the Government. In many respects this is the most remarkable and creditable financial achievement on record. Marvellous as the financial triumphs of the United States Government have been, in the opinion of the most competent observers abroad, this latest success ranks above all others. It is well for those who have been carping at Secretary Windom's plan to consider that he has saved the country, within the past thirty days, and by a mere exercise of common sense, about $4,000,000 a year in interest, besides retaining power to effect a similar reduction in the interest on a large proportion of the five per cent bonds. The Administration of President Garfield, though only two months in power, has entitled itself to public gratitude in two respects, in its management of the finances and in its exposure and reform of postal frauds, and Senators who meditate a controversy with the Administration may as well have that fact in mind. What similar proofs have they given of zeal for the public good.

It is already certain that a large part of the surplus revenue for the current year will remain unexpended, after all the called bonds that may be presented for redemption shall have been paid. The Treasury still has at command the remainder of the surplus revenue, and as much as $120,000,000 which may be obtained by the sale of four per cent bonds. The probability is that these resources will be immediately employed to reduce the interest on the five per cents. Perhaps it will be deemed wise to call in at first only a part of five per cents outstanding, allowing for these, as for the six per cents, a month or more during which requests for continuance may be received. There are many reasons for believing that the notice will meet with a more general and prompt response, by the holders of the five per cents, than it has met from the holders of six per cents, and the Treasury can undoubtedly achieve another triumph as valuable to the people as the one which is to-day recorded.

Perhaps He Said It.

It is alleged that Senator Cameron said to the President on a recent occasion, that his course would inevitably drive Senators from him who desired to give his administration a fair chance and an earnest support. It is also further alleged that the Senator said on the same occasion that if the President persisted in the present contest he would be obliged to take his stand with Mr. Conkling for the good of his party. If Senator Cameron said these things to the President, every real friend he has in the State will regret it. If he has concluded to make common cause with Mr. Conkling in resisting the exercise of the Presidential prerogative, he has made a mistake. A Senator has a high position and great influence, but the power that made Senators and Presidents is more than a match for either.

The greatest good the party can obtain just now is to be saved from its pretended friends. We are well convinced that the good of the party lies in supporting the President in the course he has marked out, so far as that course is developed.

If Senator Cameron has concluded to cast in his fortunes with Mr. Conkling, he has concluded very badly for himself; for if the President stands firmly by his position he will achieve a victory. The people are with him in this conflict with insolence and dominating pride.

The New York Senator has always acted as if the Republican party could not venture to live without gaining his consent. Nor is he altogether to blame. He has great abilities, and he has been deferred to by men who ought to know better. He stands to the Republican party exactly as the south stands to the Democratic party—as a power to be conciliated and nursed with sops of wine. As we utterly deny that the policy of this conntry is to be shaped with any particular reference to the south, so we as utterly deny that the policy of the Republican party is to be shaped with particular reference to the wishes of Mr. Conkling. A power that must be conciliated at every step is a power that needs to be limited to a very narrow field. The Republican party is as much greater than any man as its number exceed that numerically. And we are in favor of impressing that fact upon every man now in public life. It may save future complications to have this fact entirely comprehended.

The Philadelphia Press thinks it time that the fooling at Washington over the New York Custom House was stopped. Here is the way it looks at the matter: There is one plain, straightforward course, and that is for the Senate to take up the nomination and act on it like a man. It was for the President to nominate and he took the responsibility. It is for the Senate to confirm or to reject, and let it take its responsibility with the same decision. All this weak attempt to evade the duty and patch up some way of avoiding an issue is unworthy of sensible men. Mr. Conkling can survive if Judge Robertson is confirmed, and the President will still be President if Judge Robertson is rejected; but the President cannot retreat without suffering, and the Senate cannot continue to palter in this pitiful fashion without disrepute. The question is not so much what shall be done with a particular nomination as whether unwarranted pretentions shall be suflered to triumph over the rights of the President and the tendencies of liberal and better politics. On that question there is very little division in the public mind.

Mr. Conkling says that he will never cross the threshold of the White House so long as Mr. Garfield continues President. Isn't it dreadful? If the prospect of such a terrible retaliation is not enough to bring Mr. Garfield to terms he must be a man of adamant, for of course he cannot be so insensible to the charm of Mr. Conkling's society as not to appreciate the greatness of the deprivation with which he is threatened. Mr. Conkling is such an amiable and genial gentleman, to say nothing of his good looks, that should he be so cruel as to execute his rash design and to withdraw the light of his countenance from the White House, society at the Executive Mansion would be under a cloud. But perhaps Mr. Garfield and his family will be able to stand it.

The readiness with which the holders of the six per cents acquiesced in Mr. Windom's proposal made the issue of the circular in regard to the fives a matter of course. There can be no reasonable doubt that the response in this case will be no less satisfactory than it was in the first instance. It had been supposed in some quarters that Mr. Windom might be emboldened by the signal success of his experiment to make a reduction of one-half per cent. in the rate of interest offered, and it is not improbable that this might have been advantageously done. But it would have been running a risk, which the Secretary showed his discretion in avoiding. To let well enough alone was in this, as it is in most cases, the best policy.

When Governor Foster arrived in Washington the other day, several of the unvertebrated Senators called upon him and requested him to use his influence with the President to bring about "harmony." This he declined to do, but he courteously offered to suggest a way for them to get out of their difficulty. They asked him to do so, and he at once made this proposal: "Let Mr. Conkling go to the President and say, 'Mr. President, I am opposed to Robertson, but you have nominated him for an important position, which is your right, and I shall make no further opposition.'" That would, indeed, be a first-class solution of the problem.

The preposterous charge is made by the Conkling journals that the President is waging a personal war on the Primate. No such charge was heard while the President was appointing eleven of Conkling's friends to office. But when one anti-Conkling man was appointed the Primate took his position in front of the locomotive, and announced that he should consider it a personal attack if he were run into. Possibly the bull in the same position had a similar motion, but it didn't do him any good or prevent the spectators laughing at him.

The French have settled their little difficulty with the Bey of Tunis with a neatness and dispatch which afford a striking contrast to the British procedure under similar circumstances. They have carried their point, and have sufficiently established their authority, without having recourse to the clumsy process of annexation, pure and simple. English diplomatists will find it worth their while to study the tactics by which a difficult complication has been so speedily disposed of.

Concord Monitor: The situation at Washington remains unchanged, and the specials from that city give nothing of interest concerning the struggle over Mr. Robertson's nomination. The people at large have formed their opinion upon the contest, and the overwhelming sentiment of press and people in the country is that President Garfield is entitled to fair play at the hands of his friends, and shall have it.

The following is the anti-treating amendment to the Liquor law of Wisconsin, recently passed by the Wisconsin Legislature and approved by the Governer: "Any persons who shall purchase, pay for, or by any device whatsoever procure any such liquors or drinks for or in behalf of any person other than himself, to be drank as a beverage by such other person, upon the premises or in any public place, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than $5 nor more than $10 for each offense.

A Death-Bed Confession.

The people of Princess Anne, Crisfield and other parts of Somerset county are greatly excited over the reported confession of a woman who is now on her death-bed, of having murdered a man eighteen years ago. Two negroes were executed for the crime in 1866. The murder occurred some time during the latter part of 1861, the victim being Azariah Dougherty, who was found dead in his store. As was then supposed, his money was the incentive for the crime. Suspicion rested upon two colored men, who were arrested soon after the murder was perpetrated, but no money was found in their possession, and none could be found about the premises of Dougherty. It was generally supposed that some other party or parties were accessory to the crime, but time failed to unravel the mystery, and the men arrested were soon after placed on trial for murder and found guilty and sentenced to be hanged.

The evidence upon which they were convicted was purely circumstantial, all efforts to show directly that they committed the crime having failed. The strongest evidence connecting them with the murder is said to have been the finding in the pocket of one of the accused of a knife that it was shown belonged to Dougherty. On the scaffold both men solemnly protested innocence down to the moment when the fatal drop fell, and one of them, in a speech from the gallows, declared himself guiltless of the terrible crime and said the perpetrator of the murder would be discovered in less than twenty years, and that he wouldn't be a black man, either.

The story of the crime and execution had long since been almost forgotten, but the reported confession made public now has revived it and aroused the curious interest of all familiar with the tragedy and the subsequent startling development. The woman who is reputed to have made the startling confession is a Mrs. Patty A. Ward, living a few miles from Crisfield. She is suffering from a terrible cancer which has placed her beyond all fear of human law, and her confession is believed to have been prompted by a knowledge of her approaching death and the fear of entering into the presence of her Maker without having confessed her crime. It is understood that she has given to her friends a full detail of the horrible affair, in which she discloses the fact that she together with her son, murdered Mr. Dougherty for his money. The son died a few years ago and a short time before his death it is said he expressed a wish to disclose something—as it is believed, his share of the crime—but that Mrs. Ward prevented him doing so by placing her hand over his mouth. There are many rumors in circulation about the whole affair, one being to the effect that the friends of the dying woman won't allow her confession to be given to the public until after her death has taken place.

Manners Two Hundred Years Ago.

A curious little book, called "The Rules of Civility," which was published in 1675, throws amusing light on the manners of our ancestors two centuries ago. "Being in discourse with a man," we read on one page, "'tis no less than ridiculous to pull him by the buttons, to play with his band strings, belt or to punch him now and then on the stomach." Again, "It argues neglect, and to undervalue a man, to sleep when he is discoursing or reading. Therefore, good manners command it to be forbid; beside something may happen in the act that may offend, as snoring, sweating, gaping or dribbling." More explicit are the rules for behavior at table. "In eating observe to let your hands be clean. Feed not with both your hands, nor keep your knife in your hand. Dip not your fingers in the sauce, or lick them when you have done. If you have occasion to sneeze or cough, take your hat, or put your napkin before your face. Drink not with your mouth full nor unwiped, nor so long till you are forced to breathe in the glass. There are rules also for the drawingroom. "If a person of quality be in the company of ladies, 'tis too juvenile and light to play with them, to toss or tumble them, to kiss them by surprise, to force away their hoods, their fans, or their ruffs. It is unhandsome among ladies, or any other serious company, to throw off one's cloak, to pull off one's peruke, to cut one's nails, to tie garter, to change shoes if they pinch, to call for one's slippers to be at ease, to sing between the teeth, or to drum with one's fingers."

The Park Committee of Allegheny have accepted the offer of the Allegheny County Electric Light Company to put up fifteen lights in the parks in that city.

The State.

The Board of Pardons will not hold a session this month, and all cases filed are continued until June 21.

The recent thunder-storm in Hollidaysburg caused the distruction of a number of telephone boxes which were not furnished with lightning arresters.

The carpenter shops attached to the Reading Iron Works were slightly damaged by the fire on Wednesday afternoon, caused by the explosion of a lamp.

George Young, a machinist in the employ of the Reading Railroad Company, and Freddie Conrad, both of the Reading, were overcome with the heat, in that city on Wednesday. Neither case resulted fatally.

John Sheenfuse, a German peddler, committed suicide in the yard of a hotel in Lancaster county a few days ago by looping a rope around his neck and tying it to a feed trough He has a wife and children in the old country.

The jury in the case of Hugh Herrick and James Maley, tried in Schuylkill county on the charge of killing John McCann in December last, have returned a verdict of manslaughter against Maley and not guilty as to Herrick.

The residence of Rev. Father Donohue, of St. Vincent's Catholic Church, at Plymouth, was entered by burglars at at early hour Thursday morning. Chloroform was administered to the priest, after which he was robbed of money and jewelry to the value of $3000.

The eccentric "Doctor" John Schmit, who was tried in the Schuylkill county Court for killing Monroe Seltzer at McKeansburg in March last, has been acquitted. The defendent is weak minded, and the evidence showed that he had been provoked beyond endurance by his victim before he took the defensive.

Abner McConnell, alias Red Fox, recently convicted of making and passing counterfeit money, was sentenced on Wednesday to four years, hard labor in the penitentiary and to pay a fine of $1000. Ringer, his accomplice, who was arrested at the same time, was sentenced to one year in the penitentiary and fined $1000.

An odd wager was decided between two working men in a West Pittston mine a few days ago. The question to be decided was to see which of the two could load a car, capable of holding 8000 pounds of coal, the quickest. One performed the task in the unprecedented time of eleven minutes, while his competitor required eighteen minutes to complete the job.

Health Hints.

All stimulants, even tea and coffee, act upon the system as poison, and are consequently injurious.

For children, a nearly infallible peptic corrective is a fast-day past in cheerful out-door exercise.

The Family Physician says: Digestion requires leisure. Never eat until you can be sure of leisure for digestion. After rest then "give an hour of exercise to every pound of food."

Terra Alba, or white earth, is used to adulterate white sugars, cream of tartar, and other commonly used articles. Its use tends to produce disease of the kidneys, bladder and stomach.

Writes Mr. Labouchere: I arrived at Milan from the Lake of Como. I felt the symptoms of malaria, and instead of sending for a doctor, shut myself up in my bedroom for two days and two nights, during which my only nourishment was lemonade. This regime entirely cured me. Were those who catch any malarial fever to pursue the same course they would find it worth all the prescriptions that doctors ever wrote.

Dr. Guillasse, of the French navy, reports that in the early stages of typhoid fever coffee is almost a specific against typhoid fever. He gives it to adults, two or three tablespoonfuls of strong, black coffee every two hours alternating with one or two teaspoonfuls of claret or Burgundy wine. The beneficial effect is immediate. A little lemonade or citrate of magnesia should be given daily and after awhile a little quinine.

Poetry.

The Bluebird.

When ice is thawed and snow is gone,
And racy sweetness floods the the trees,—
When snowbirds from the hedge have flown,
And on the hive porch swarm the bees,
Drifting down the first warm wind
That thrills the earliest days of spring,
The bluebird seeks our maple groves
And charms them into tasseling.

He sits among the delicate sprays,
With mists of splendor round him drawn,
And through the spring's prophetic veil
Sees summer's rich fulfillment dawn.
He sings, and his is Nature's voice—
A gush of melody sincere
From that great fount of harmony
That thaws and runs when spring is here.

Short is his song, but strangely sweet
To ears aweary of the low,
Dull tramp of winter's sullen feet,
Sandaled in ice, and muffed in snow;
Short is his song, but though it runs
A hint of dithyrambs yet to be—
A sweet suggestiveness that has
The influence of prophecy.

From childhood I have nursed a faith
In bluebirds' songs and winds of spring;
They tell me after frost and death
There comes a time of blossoming;
And after snow and cutting sleet
The cold, stern mood of Nature yields
To tender warmth, when bare pink feet
Of children press her greening fields.

Sing strong and clear, O bluebird dear!
While all the land with splendor fills,
While maples gladden in the vales,
And plum trees blossom on the hills;
Float down the wind on shining wings,
And do thy will by grove and stream,
While through my life spring's freshness runs,
Like music through a poet's dreams.

Our Story Teller.

The Twin Bracelets.

'I will not threaten you, Hilton! Years ago I made my will, and you will be my heir. I shall not alter one line of that document, because I will not bribe you to do my will. nor to be an honorable man. You may marry whom you will, you may defy my wishes in every way, and lose my love and respect, but this money will be yours.'

"Do you mean, Uncle George, that I shall lose your love and respect if I marry Ada Willet?'

'Or any other woman who is absolutely nobody. What do you know of her?'

'Only what she has told me herself, that her mother died of poverty, after struggling to support herself by her needle. They were miserably poor for a long time, and then Mrs. Willet began giving work to Ada's mother. When she died, Mrs. Willet took Ada to her own home, and after giving her every advantage her own child could have enjoyed, adopted her.'

'What was her name?'

'Smith.'

'Bah!' said Mr. Hilton, with every expression of disgust. 'Well, marry her if you will. Your present allowance shall be doubled, but you need not bring her here,' and with a sudden fierceness he added: 'I want no woman here to remind me of the past I had hoped forgotten.'

Never, in all his recollection of his grave, quiet uncle, had Hilton seen him moved. His voice was sharp with the pang of some sudden memory, his eyes flashed, and his whole frame trembled with emotion.

'You are a man now,' he said with one of those strange impulses to confidence that often seize the most reserved men, 'a man seeking a wife. I will tell you what never before passed my lips to another living being. I have a wife somewhere, and a child, it may be.' Utter astonishment kept Hilton silent.

'It's all my own fault,' Mr. Hilton continued, 'that I am a lonely, miserable man, instead of a happy husband and father. Twenty years ago, when I was past forty years old, I fell in love. Fell in love, for I was nearly insane over Myra Delano when I had seen her three times. I courted her with eager attention, rich presents, flattery—every fascination I could command. I was not an unattractive manat 40 years of age. I had traveled extensively, been a close student, was emphatically a society man, a successful lawyer, and commanding large wealth. Myra was twenty five, superbly handsome, accomplished and graceful.

'I thought she loved me. I thought there was only love and devotion in the lovelight of her large blue eyes, the varying color on her cheek. We were married, traveled two years on the continent, then returned here to this house, and opened its doors to society. Our child was nearly a year old when we came home, and what love I could spare from Myra I gave to baby Anna. We were very popular, being hospitable and generous, gathering around us refined people and both exerting ourselves to the utmost for the pleasure of our guests. But while we were traveling, all in all to each other, there was sleeping in my heart a demon who stirred to life when we returned. Strong as my love I found my jealousy. I was an idiot—a mad jealous idiot—for I stung a proud, sensitive woman to contempt of my opinion, defiant of my unworthy suspicions. Now I see that Myra was but filling her proper place in society as hostess or guest; but then, blinded by my jealousy, I grudged any man a pleasant smile or a cheery word. I cannot tell you now of every scene that turned her love for me to fear and dislike. She became pale and miserable, often sullen and defiant. Finally she left me.'

"Left you?'

'I came home one afternoon, after conducting an intricate criminal case, and found a note on the table telling me that Myra could no longer endure the life of constant quarreling and reproach. She had taken her child and would never return to me.'

'Did she not go to her relatives?'

'She had but few. Her father died while we were abroad, and having been considered a rich man was found to have left less than his funeral expenses. She had an aunt and some cousins, to all of whom I went, but who denied all knowledge of her. After searching with the eagerness of penitence deep and sincere, and love most profound, I finally advertised, and even employed private police investigation. It was all in vain; I never found wife or child.'

'Yet you think they live?'

'I cannot tell. I remained here for five years and then, as you know, went to see my only sister, dying of consumption.'

'And to become my second father. But Uncle George, can nothing be done now?'

'We have been in London three years and every month there has been an advertisement only Myra would understand in the leading papers. I have never had one line of answer. No, my boy. It is hopeless now. If in the future you ever know of my wife and child I trust them to your care and generosity.'

'When we were in Paris,' he said, 'I had a bracelet made of Myra's hair and mine woven together; she has the companion one. This tiny coil of gold in the clasp was cut from the baby's head, but three months old. It must have been some lingering love that made Myra still keep the bracelet like this, which she wore constantly. What is the matter Hilton? You are as white as death.'

'Nothing. Is your wife's picture in the locket?'

'Yes; you see how beautiful she was?'

'I see more than that,' said Hilton; 'and I dare not tell you what I hope. Will you give me one little hour, to see if—'

'If what?'

'Only one hour—I will be back then.'

'Stop!' Mr. Hilton cried shaking with excitement.

But his nephew was gone. Hoping, fearing, not knowing what to hope or fear, Mr. Hilton watched the clock until the hour should be over. He walked up and down, tried to read; he lived over again the past, whose remorseless memory had been so vividly recalled. With Myra's picture before him, he thought over again of that wild, fierce love, that had been his happiness and his blight.

'Why was I not calm, reasonable as became my years and my position?' he asked himself bitterly. 'Why did I give a boy's love to a woman who had lived in society and respected all its requirements? I lived in idle life—Myra the one around us. Where is Hilton? Only three minutes gone, and it seems a day since he was here.'

But before the hour was over Hilton returned. In his eagerness to question him Mr. Hilton did not notice that he came through the drawing room to the library, where he waited, leaving the door a little open.

'Where have yor been?' Mr. Hilton inquired.

'To procure this!' Hilton answered gravely, placing in his uncle's hand the duplicate to the bracelet on the table.

The same braid of sunny brown hair, with here and there some raven black streaked with gray; the same small clasp with a wee coil of baby curl under the glass; the same lettering too—George and Myra twined together in fantastic scroll and twists. For several minutes there was deep silence. The old man could not speak, and the young one would not break in upon what he felt to be sacred emotion. At last lifting his head, George Hilton asked: 'Does Myra live? Can she forgive me?'

'It is years since she died,' Hilton answered, 'but in heaven she has surely forgiven you. She never spoke of you to your child but in words of respect and affection, though she spoke of you as dead.'

'My child! Do you know my child?'

'I know and love her. Do you not guess Uncle George, where I saw that bracelet whose duplicate I recognized at once, whose face is the living copy of the one in your locket? Must I tell you that the child Mrs. Willet rescued from poverty and adopted as her own is my cousin and your daughter?'

'Ada Smith?'

'Smith is the name that her mother thought most probably would best conceal her identity, and Ada is the name of Mrs. Willet's only child, who died in infancy.'

'But why have you not brought her to me?' asked Mr. Hilton, with almost a sob in his voice.

And as he spoke, the door, which Hilton had left ajar, opened, and across the threshold stepped a tall, beautiful girl, with sunny brown hair and large blue eyes, who waited timidly until her father came quickly to meet her.

'Anna!' he said softly. 'Can this be my baby—my wee daughter? It must be, for it is my Myra, who has not grown old and gray, as I have, but lived in perpetual youth. My child, I wronged your mother, but have sorrowed and repented for that wrong. Can you forgive me?'

The tears were falling fast from Anna Hilton's eyes, and her voice was trembling with sobs as she said: 'My dear father!'

That was all; but as George Hilton folded his child in his arms, he knew he was forgiven, and for him at least there might be happiness in making others happy.

A Desperado's Escape.

A communication from Santa Fe, New Mexico, says: Full particulars of the escape of William Bonney, alias "Billy the Kid," from the jail of Lincoln county have reached here The Kid was in charge of Bob Alinger and J. W. Bell, deputy sheriffs cool and brave men. It seems however that by docile behavior the prisoner put them off their guard. On the evening of the day in question Alinger had gone to supper, leaving Bell to watch the prisoner. Bell was sitting on the floor talking when the Kid, who heavily shackled and handcuffed, approached him pleasantly and suddenly jumped at him with the swiftness of a wildcat, hitting him on the head and fracturing his skull. He then snatched Bell's pistol and shot him in the breast. Bell ran down the steps and fell at the foot a corpse. Then Kid kicked open the door, procured a hatchet and knocked off his shackles he also broke open the door of the armory and took possession of several guns and pistols. Bob Alinger, hearing the shot, left his supper and ran toward the jail. When entering a small gate leading through the jail fence, the Kid who was upstairs, shot him with a gun loaded with buckshot, killing him instantly. The town of Lincoln seemed terror stricken, and nobody thought of opposing, the Kid stole a horse and rode off, armed with four revolvers and a Winchester rifle. He has expressed a determination to kill Governor Lew Wallace, who failed to pardon him, and who by a curious coincidence, signed the Kid's death warrant at Santa Fe on the same day that he escaped at Lincoln.

The Tragedian's Daughter.

On Howard street, the other day, "Where are you going my pretty maid?" asked a benevolent old gentleman, as he chucked under the chin a little tot of six-year-old, who was walking gravely along with a basket on her arm.

"Give thee good-day, graybeard," replied the midget, simply. My father bade me to the shambles hie for a fat haunch."

"W-w-what?" ejaculated the old party.

"Haply thou knowest him, the good man Skidmore?" inquired the tiny dame.

"N-o-o," said the gentleman, much puzzled at the evident earnestness of the child. "You're a quaint little thing. Come with me and I will buy you some candy."

"Alack! I am forbid to tarry, gentle sir. I need be blithe. Their patience stays upon my coming.

"Good-bye," said the old gentleman.

"Rest you, merry master," and dipping a chubby little courtesy, the mite trotted off.

"Bless my soul! what an extraordinary child!" said the gentleman to a neighbor, who had been looking on.

"Oh! that's nothing," replied the other. "You see she's the daughter of Bilson, the heavy man at the theator, and I suppose they talk so much of that kind of lingo in the family that it comes natural to her. Doesn't hear anything else, you see."

A Georgia Duel.

From the Sumter (Ga.) Republican.

On Saturday night Henry Redding and Henry Sapp, two colored gentlemen in the employ of the Prince Brothers, had some hot words and one of them called the other by an opprobrious epithet that caused an immediate challenge. The friends of the parties chose a quiet spot in the pine grove to the left of the depot, the weapons for the occasion being heavy hickory sticks. Redding and his second were on the ground first, awaiting Sapp, who at last sent his second, accompanied by a colored surgeon, to the ground, while he stood off about one hundred paces, to see if his enemy was ready. The second and surgeon found that everything was all right and that Redding was eager for the fray to begin. They called to Sapp to came on, but that worthy took to his heels, saying, "I'll be dar in a few seconds, as I'se got a little business to do for de white folks fust," and left the rest awaiting him. About one o'clock they left and Sapp, who had quietly returned to watch proceedings, after they had gotten out of sight and hearing, emerged from his hiding-place with a long pole, with which he belabored the ground where Redding had stood unmercifully. Some one says the ground next day seemed to have been freshly ploughed. Sapp says he beat the ground to let them know "he was dar and not afeerd of de other fellow."

Local Small Talk.

—Straw hat dealers are realizing a harvest just now.

—Scrutinize your silver. Counterfeit dollars are in circulation.

—May contains five Mondays. Decoration Day comes on the last.

—Sunstrokes, picnics and mad dog shooting will soon be in order.

—Isn't it about time to begin working up a Fourth of July boom?

—Lewistown wants the telephone. Well, we'll consider the matter.

—The weather is evidently trying to make up for lost time, and is succeeding, too.

—Croquet will be a popular amusement in Bellefonte this season, as it has been in the past.

—Some of the ladies' bonnets worn this season remind one of a wash basin with one side mashed in.

—Gen. William McCandless has been invited to deliver the oration in Williamsport on Decoration day.

—Several Linn streeters are relaying their garden walks, and making other improvements about their premises.

—Hens are disposed to help along the business boom by working on full time, and as a consequence eggs are coming down in price.

—Altoona had what she supposed was a case of small pox, but it turned out to be a case of poisoning, and her citizens are much relieved in consequence.

—Horseback riding is indulged in to a considerable extent by the young people in town. There is no more enjoyable or healthful recreation than equestrianism.

—Miles of Logs! The Linden boom at Williamsport, is reported to contain 225,000,000 feet of logs, which are packed up as high as a house for nearly seven miles.

—Major Cheesman left Wednesday for Washington to assume the duties of the position recently obtained for him in the pension department. His family will not remove to the capital until fall.

—Carpenters are in demand in Bellefonte. In fact, the services of any good mechanic are hard to procure just now, and this condition of things bids fair to continue during the season.

—A fashion writer says that the latest pattern for a button is a "devil playing on a tambourine, with a background of stars behind him." We don't believe it will be regarded as profanity if we call this a devil of a style.

—Housewives are up to their necks in business just now, of the house-cleaning order. While they are about it we suggest that they take a look into the cellar. Many a sickness originates from the foul condition of this apartment.

—The friends of Mr. Levi Straub, who has been filling a position in the railroad shops at Altoona, will be pleased to learn that that gentleman has entered the employ of the car works in this place, and will again take up his residence in Bellefonte.

—We acknowledge the receipt of a copy of the Forty-eighth Annual Report of the Managers of the Pennsylvania Institution for the Blind. It is a very neatly gotten up publication, and contains much useful information concerning the working condition of the institution.

—Mrs. Magee, mother of our townsman, R. M. Magee, Esq., died Wednesday at Centre Hall, at the residence of her daughter, Mrs, John Harper. She had been confined to her bed for some months, and her death was not unexpected. She was the grandmother of Prothonotary Harper.

—A traveling salesman was fined $25 by the Burgess of Johnstown, the other day, for kissing a lady on the street against her will. Of course the "nectar" wasn't worth the money—it was paying for the privilege of committing the theft that run the bill up.

—A new Sunday paper, to be called Sunday Morning, will be launched in Altoona. The first number will appear next Sunday. The Sun says it will be a high-toned publication, under the management of George J. Akers, with Mrs. Mattie Furey, wife of the late W. P. Furey, as a regular contributor.

—Notwithstanding the abundance of ice harvested in this vicinity last winter Bellefonters will be charged at the rate of a cent a pound for that article this summer. Too steep, gentlemen, too steep. There's money in it at half a cent, and the first thing you know you'll have Lock Haven and Williamsport to compete with.

—Why don't some enterprising citizen, who has the wealth to spare, build a half dozen row boats and place them upon the mill dam for the use of those of our inhabitants who are fond of aquatic sports. By charging a reasonable sum per hour for the use of the boats, we believe it would prove a paying investment. Who will take hold of the enterprise?

—The President has withdrawn the nomination of Mr. Grier to be Third Assistant Postmaster General, he having declined the position. We don't know as we would accept it either, but, then, if there is any danger of the party bustin' up because of the office being vacant, we might be induced to fill it. Perhaps he had better send in our nomination, anyhow, as a matter of policy.

—Mr. Edgar Holt, son of J. H. Holt, Esq., of Snow Shoe, was on Thursday united in marriage with Miss Alice Gardner, daughter of Capt. Johnson Gardner, of Beech Creek. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. O. Wright, of Milesburg, after which a reception was given at the residence of the bride's parents. A party from Snow Shoe, relatives and friends of the contracting parties, went down on the mail east to attend the wedding festivities.

—Conventions for the election of county superintendents seem to be dangerous gatherings to attend. Prof. Meyer, it will be remembered, lost his pocket book, containing $25, while in attendance at the election of a county superintendent last week, and now we see by an exchange that a school director, while attending the convention at Wilkesbarre, was relieved of his pocket book containing $200. If this thing occurs very often school directors will come to regard these elections with feelings of suspicion.

—An exchange publishes this paragraph, to which our readers, particularly those who have been afflicted by the plague, will say amen: "Persons who regard other people's rights as worthy of respect will not allow their fowls to run at large during the gardening season. It is too much for human nature to bear when a thrifty gardener finds his carefully prepared beds or seeds scattered to the winds by the fowls of some careless and self-interested neighbor. We notice that the sort of people who let their chickens annoy others will not take a hint or even a broad request when ever so mildly given by the injured person. Nothing short of a dead fowl or two will convince them that the gardener really means business."

—As the contrivance mentioned below, for intimidating crows, is not patented, the farmers in this section might find it to their advantage also to make use of the great box trick: "A Maine man has invented a scarecrow, to be placed in corn fields, which consists of a box seven feet long and two feet square, with horizontal barrels arranged inside. The barrels are to be loaded with powder and at regular intervals exploded by means of clock work within the box." If this machine, at one explosion, would scare a flock of crows so bad that they would never return to the State it might work, but if it had to be kept in constant operation we are of the opinion that it would cost as much to run it as the whole corn crop was worth, as good powder is worth 50 cents a pound.

The Reformed Church and Speculative Insurance.

West Susquehanna Classis of the Reformed church, which convened at Selinsgrove, Snyder county, passed the following resolutions on what is known as Speculative Life Insurance:

WHEREAS, Almost the whole territory of West Susquehanna Classis is covered by what is commonly known as Speculative Life Insurance;

Resolved, That we regard this business as fraudulent and wrong in principle, and as very demoralizing in its effects.

Resolved, That we hereby earnestly exhort all our people to discourage and shun this business as a great public evil, hurtful to the church and to the State as well as to the individual.

Resolved, That our pastors try to secure the early publication of this action in the various county papers which circulate among their people.

The Way of It.

Our query as to why the car company doesn't purchase its lumber in Centre county has been answered. It is quality and not prices that is taken into consideration, and as Georgia pine is much harder and more lasting than Pennsylvania pine, it is better adapted to the construction of cars, and, secondly, as Georgia pine does not grow in the Keystone State, the company is obliged to patronize the Southern market in order to procure the right kind of material. This explains why we see so many car loads of lumber arriving in town from Baltimore, and none from the yards of Centre county lumbermen. See it?

Leg Broken.

Mr. Samuel Kleckner, of Lock Haven, foreman of Geo. R. Boak & Co.'s mill in Snow Shoe, had the misfortune to break one of his legs, between the knee and ankle, on Tuesday last. He was working about a pile of logs at the time the accident occurred, and in some manner was caught in the timber, with the above result.

Palmer—Weaver.

The Harrisburg Telegraph publishes the following account of the marriage of Rev. John M. Palmer, of this place, which happy occurrence took place in that city on Thursday, May 5:

"Last evening a very large and highly respectable company of colored people assembled at the residence of Mrs. Jane Chester, on Chestnut St., to witness the marriage of her granddaughter, Miss Mary Jane Weaver, of this city, to the Rev. John M. Palmer, of Bellefonte, Centre county. Miss Weaver is the eldest daughter of Mrs. Chester's eldest daughter Charlotte.

"The ceremony took place at 7½ o'clock, and was performed by the Rev. R. J. M. Long, of Trenton, N. J., assisted by the Rev. W. H. Brown, of Williamsport, and the Rev. Geo. M. Bonner, of Harrisburg. The bridesmaids were Miss Ada Weaver (sister of the bride), Miss Mary Taylor, of Lewisburg, Miss Mattie Early, of Harrisburg, and Miss Kate Stanton, of Carlisle. The groomsmen were Mr. Charles and Rev. Herbert Palmer (brothers of the groom), of Lewistown, Mr. J. L. Thomas and Mr. John H. Early, both of Harrisburg.

"The toilets of the bride and bridesmaids were very rich and beautiful, while the groom and groomsmen appeared in the conventional black with white vest. There were over three hundred guests present, among whom were many white ladies of the best families of this city, friends of Mrs. Chester for years. The presents were numerous, consisting of the usual silver offerings, China and majolica, table linen, vases, books, bronzes, pictures, etc., all of which were displayed in one of the rooms for the inspection of the guests."

The Gazette, of Lewistown, the former home of the groom, thus alludes to the occasion, in which mention is made of several prominent colored citizens of this place:

"The bridal party arrived here on Thursday night to remain one week. Next morning a party came over from Bellefonte to attend the reception of Mrs. E. E. Palmer, the mother of the groom, given on Friday evening. This party consisted of Mr. Geo. G. Skinner and lady, Mr. A. V. Jackson and lady, and Mr. Amos Bond and lady. Mr. Skinner is the newly elected school director, and a prominent man of Bellefonte, was recently elected to highest church orders, and now assists Rev. J. M. Palmer in his pulpit ministrations. During the afternoon and evening of Friday the Palmer residence on West Third street was made vocal with music by Mrs. Bond, who has become distinguished as a singer."

Tramps Appearing.

A good many tramps are making their headquarters in and about Bellefonte at present. When spoken to in regard to their business here, and intentions, they nearly all say that they have secured a job at the car works and are waiting for operations to begin. This is mere talk, however. Nine out of ten wouldn't work if an opportunity was given them, preferring rather to roam about the country and sponge their living from charitably-disposed people. Work is plenty, wages reasonable, and when an able-bodied man comes to your residence on a begging mission you may set him down as a professional tramp. Invite him into the yard and give him an opportunity of exercising himself with a hoe, or set him to cleaning out the cellar, and if he treats these propositions to earn his dinner, an old coat or a pair of shoes with contempt, as he undoubtedly will, hustle him out upon the highway in short order, as such a character is not to be trusted on the premises.

Those of our readers who respond to the appeals of these men for food and clothing are paying a premium on idleness, as we look at it, and encouraging tramps to pursue a begging life. "Work, or no hash," is a good motto for our readers to try in regard to this matter.

A Cure for Diphtheria.

The Hamilton Spectator (South Australia) publishes details of the "Greathead" cure for diphtheria. This disease is declared by Mr. Greathead to be of hydrated growth, and that the pure atmospheres are inhaled by human beings. For a grown person four drops of sulphuric acid diluted in three-quarters of a tumbler of water, with a smaller dose for children. The effect of this treatment is said to be instantaneous, the acid at once destroying the parasites and the patient coughing up the constructions. The papers have teemed with the accounts of sufferers who have recovered in a few minutes by adopting the "Greathead" treatment. Children, almost previously in a dying state, were declared to be playing about within ten minutes, and at a moderate computation some forty or fifty of these sudden recoveries have been placed on record with full particulars.

Van Dyke's SULPHUR SOAP
Is superior to all other soaps. It is combined with Sulphur in its pure, unadulterated state, which enters the pores of the skin, being absorbed into the blood through the minute capillaries, and thus acts upon the skin, whether it is healthy or in a diseased condition, both locally and constitutionally, thereby eliminating all impurities from the blood, and exciting the skin to healthy action. It produces a fineness, purity, and freshness of the complexion which is unequalled, and can be produced by no other means. No toilet, nursery or bath room is complete without it. It makes the skin pure, clear, white and healthy; is cleansing, deodorizing, disinfecting, soothing, healing and purifying; removes dandruff, chafing, ulcers, sores, eruptions, roughness and redness of the skin; relieves itching, burning and stinging of the skin, and irritation of biting and stinging insects; will relieve itching piles when nothing else will have any effect. Ask for VAN DYKE'S SULPHUR SOAP; insist upon it, and take no imitation. Sold by druggists. Aschenbach & Miller, proprietors, 301 Callowhill street, Philadelphia. 12-20-1y

Miscellaneous.

If you cannot read this print distinctly by lamp or gaslight in the evening at a distance of 10 inches, your eyes are failing, no matter what your age, and your eyes need help. Your sight can be improved and preserved if properly corrected. It is a wrong idea that spectacles should be dispensed with as long as possible. If they assist the vision use them. There is no danger of seeing too well, so long as the print is not magnified; it should look natural size but plain.

It is known to all who have been compelled to resort to the use of Spectacles (notwithstanding they may be perfectly fitted to correct the optical defects), that for some cause, not until recently well defined, their use was attended with fatiguing, smarting, and otherwise disagreeable sensations. This is a universal fact of experience, and has been supposed to be entirely beyond remedy. This disagreeable sensation and disturbance of the eye is produced chiefly, perhaps we ought to say entirely, from the fact that ordinary lenses increase the sensation of heat (to which the eye, more than any other organ or part of the body, is sensitive), as also the actinic or chemical properties of the rays of light.

It is well known that these peculiarities of light are identified with certain colors of each ray; and the point of importance, or without using technicalities, is to construct lenses so that these properties of light shall be neutralized; this can be done by introducing a neutralizing tint into their manufacture, the difficulty of which, however, consists in the selection of a color which shall have this effect, and, at the same time, shall not otherwise impair the lenses for purposes of vision. The

Arundel Tinted Lens

Is designed to effect this purpose. The peculiarity of its manufacture consists in the introduction into the glass of a slight Violet Color, in such manner that the high and low numbers of the lens prepared from this glass, although varying in thickness, are of the same delicate tint and of sufficient power to neutralize the heating and actinic power of the rays of light. Read the following:

[From R. S. Mershon, Esq., Zanesville, Ohio.]

"I have put the Arundels through the following tests:—I placed an eight-inch Arundel, and an eight-inch white lens side by side, sharply focused in the strong sunlight, with their foci directed on the bulbs of two thermometers, and the difference was four (4°) degrees in temperture in favor of the ARUNDEL. Again, I placed the same lenses side by side on a piece of sensitised photographic paper, and the white glass discolored the surface quicker than the ARUNDEL. These two tests prove these two points, viz: that the ARUNDEL intercepts the solar heat-rays and the chemical rays also."

And the following from a Centre county man whose letter can be seen at my store:

* * * "I am very much pleased with the glasses. They have been more beneficial to my eyes than all the medicine I ever put in them."

If you experience any unpleasantness in reading or can't see distinctly, come in and have your eyes tested. I think I have something good for you.

THE LATEST NEWS.

The Contest in the Senate.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—It was orderedthat when the Senate adjourn to-day it be to meet on Monday· Executive session followed and when the doors reopened the Senate adjourned, A number of nominations were confirmed, as noted elsewhere. No motion was entered (as it was rumored there would be) for the reconsideration of the vote by which ex-Senator Matthews was yesterday confirmed as Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

ANOTHER CAUCUS HELD.

The Republican Senators held a caucus this morning for the purpose of individually reporting to each other what progress if any had been made in the efforts of members of the caucus to harmonize party differences in regard to contested nominations. No definite plan appears to have been agreed upon, but several Senators say they were encouraged by the conference this morning to hope that a satisfactory adjustment may yet be effected. During the conference attention was called to the fact (which has quite geneally been lost sight of) that the action taken by the caucus last week in regard to contested cases extended no further than to provide that they should not be brought before the Senate until after clearing the docket of uncontested business, and various Senators today announced that from and after the time when this clearance shall be effected (which is apparently very near at hand) they will.

Swift Retribution.

NEW YORK, May 13.—A Talladega Alabama, dispatch says that at a picnic held near there a little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Toole strayed away and was caught by a burglar negro, who chocked her to death. He robbed her of her jewelry, and was in the act of throwing the body into the river when detected by the father. The negro was captured after a desperate struggle, and hanged to a tree by the infuriated men of the picnic. The body was left hanging.

Mrs. Garfield Still Very Ill.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Mrs. Garfield is reported somewhat better this morning, but in the afternoon was not so well. She is suffering from the extreme heat and nervous prostration. The carriage road leading up to the White House has been barricaded against carriages, and strict orders given to the ushers and messengers to preserve quiet about the house.

Indian Troubles Feared.

NEW ORLEANS, La., May 16.—A special despatch from Little Rock Ark., to the Democrat says: "Governor Overton, of the Chickasaw nation, has gathered together an army of 400 men, and has issued an order to the effect that Texas cattle raisers and white men generally must leave the country before June 1 or force will be used. A similar situation prevails in the Choctaw nation. Governor McCurtin has instructed the Sheriffs to immediately organnize and arm militia companies to assist in driving out the whites. The trouble in the Chickasaw nation is said to have grown out of the refusal of Texans to pay more than twelve and a half cents per head for grazing cattle therin. Governor Overton demanding twenty five cents per head. In the Choctaw nation the trouble is chiefly in regard to the law allowing whites to live in that country, the Indians holding that nearly all the white population are there without proper authority. A serious conflict between the whites and the Indians is feared.

An Army Officer Killed.

CHEYENNE, W. T. May 16.—A despatch from Fort Niobrara, Neb., says:—Second Lieutenant Samuel A. Cherry, Fifth cavalry, and escort, while out scouting for road agents near Niobrara came upon them suddenly, when a fight ensued in which Lieutenant Cherry was killed. The road agents escaped. Cherry was born in Indiana, apointed from the Military Academy second lieutenant, Twenty Third infantry June 16, 1875, and transferred to the Fifth cavalry July 28, 1876. He was adjutant of Thornburgh's command on the Ute expedition, and in the action at Milk River distinguished himself for bravery. He was engaged to marry the daughter of Congressman Harry White, of Pennsylvania.

Fatal Railroad Accident.

LOGANSPORT, Ind., May 16.—A special despatch reports that a train on the Logansport and Terrehaute Railroad struck a break in the track near Cutter Station, twenty miles north of Logansport, at half-past three on Saturday, throwing the engine over a trestle. The fireman, Moynshan, was killed, and the engineer, Higley, and the messenger were badly hurt. Several others were injured slightly.

Cloud Phenomena.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, May 16.—From Bedford, Ind., a report is received of the phenomena of a cloud, as low as the tree tops, rushing over the town yesterday with the roar of a hurricane. Only thirty-five minutes intervened from the time it was seen approaching until its disappearance. The sky was clear at the time and the sun was shining. A reduction of from ten to fifteen degrees in the temperature followed the passage of the cloud and continued for about ten minutes.

Mrs Garfield and the White House.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Statements having been published that the sanitary condition of the Executive Mansion is very bad, and that the illness of Mrs. Garfield is partly attributed to that cause, the three republican members of the Senate on Public Buildings and Grounds—Messrs. Rollins, Morrill and Angus Cameron—called at the White House Saturday and inspected the building with a view to reporting its condition to Congress.

Resignation of Senators Conkling and Platt.

Senators Conkling and Platt resigned their positions in the U. S. Senate on Monday. The resignations took the country by surprise. There is but one view taken of the action of the Senators, and that is, that neither of them has any idea of retiring permanently, but that Mr. Conkling has adopted this course in order to secure from the New York Legislature, now in session, an endorsement of his course in promptly re-electing him. If the papers reached the Governor yesterday, as was expected, the vacancies can be filled on Tuesday next. In this way Mr. Conkling will escape the mortification of a direct defeat, and Senators who would have been disposed to stand by him will now be released and vote for Judge Robertson's confirmation.

Three things to delight—in beauty, frankness and freedom.

Three things to avoid—idleness, loquacity and flippant jesting.

The Right Way to Advertise.

That excellent publication, the Printers' Circular, makes the following sound remarks concerning judicious advertising, which we submit to the careful consideration of our advertisers:

"A model advertisement is designed to satisfy the rational demand of a probable customer to know what you have got to sell. The successful advertiser, therefore, observes three rules: First, he aims to furnish the information which everybody wants; second, he aims to reach that part of the public whose wants he is prepared to satisfy; and third, he endeavors to make his information as easy of acquisition by the public as possible.

"The commonest and handiest thing in the American family is the newspaper, and as nearly all shopping proceeds from the family, from its needs, its intelligence, its tastes, its fashions, it follows that the thoughtful and successful advertiser approaches the family by this means. He does not waste his money and time in loading his advertising gun and shooting it off skyward in the street, at all creation, on the chance that some willing customer may be going that way, and may be brought down; on the contrary, he takes account of the advertising ammunition which he has on hand, and loads and points his gun, through the columns of some reputable newspaper, at the game he wants to hit.

"Besides knowing that newspapers are the best means of advertising, and how to pick out the best newspaper for his purpose, the successful advertiser fully appreciates the importance of persistent advertising. Mr. Bryant used to say that the great influence of the press depends, for one thing, upon its power of iteration. Presenting the same subject in many forms, it finally wins attention and acquiescence. Used in this thorough and systematic way, the advertising columns of the newspapers are as useful and essential to the merchant, as means of telling the public what he has to sell, as the clerks behind the counter are to show his goods when the people come to examine them."

"Women Never Think."

If the crabbed old bachelor who uttered this sentiment could but witness the intense thought, deep study and thorough investigation of women in determining the best medicines to keep their families well, and would note their sagacity and wisdom in selecting Hop Bitters as the best, and demonstrating it by keeping their families in perpetual health, at a mere nominal expense, he would be forced to acknowledge that such sentiments are baseless and false.—Picayune.

—Thirty-one men and women are on trial at Greenville, O., on a charge of conspiracy to murder. Jacob Long opened a beer saloon in the town, and the Palestine Crusaders, a total abstinence society, drove him away. He boldly returned, and was informed by a paper stuck under his door that his life would be taken if he sold a drop of beer. He presented proof to a grand jury that the threatening document had been voted by the Crusaders, and they were indicted.

Thirty-one men and women on trial for murder! How shocking! Very likely if they had lived in Bellefonte and been brought up on Sechler's groceries no such evil intentions or purposes would have entered their heads. These celebrated goods, from their purity and freshness, have a soothing influence on those who consume them. Fact. Every pantry should have a supply.

—Says a prominent horseman, in giving his opinion of Vanderbilt's mare, Maud S., whose great feat at Chicago put her at the head (and 'dubbed' her queen of the turf): "in my opinion the time is not far distant when a 2 minute gait will be recorded. It will certainly be the case if horsemen continue to use Kendall's Spavin Cure, as it limbers up the joints, removes all blemishes, and in fact has made a complete revolution in the horse business." See advertisement.

—By far the best remedy for the treatment of Catarrh and its kindred diseases is Ely's Cream Balm, which is having the largest sales with us of any preparation now offered. The reports are all favorable, and we do not hesitate to endorse it as superior to any and all other articles in the market. The Balm is pleasant and easy to use. Cyrus Lawall & Son, Druggists, Easton, Pa. 20-2t

—According to the score, Bill Sweeny didn't hit the target at all at the Fair Grounds on Saturday, but they do say that he knocked a brick off one of the chimneys at the Forge, and scored a bull's eye on a shirt bosom hanging on a line at Roopsburg. Now, that's what we call good long-distance shooting.

"I don't want that Stuff,"

Is what a lady of Boston said to her husband when he brought home some medicine to cure her of sick headache and neuralgia which had made her miserable for fourteen years. At the first attack thereafter, it was administered to her with such good results that she continued its use until cured, and was so enthusiastic in its praise, that she induced twenty-two of the best families in her circle to adopt it as their regular family medicine. That "stuff" is Hop Bitters.—Standard.

SUMMARY OF THE NEWS.

WASHINGTON MATTERS.

The Republican Caucus—Robertson's Case.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—The Republican caucus continued in session several hours yesterday afternoon. Considerable time was spent in inquiring and discussing how the proceedings of yesterday got out. Some thought that some eavesdropper had got the secrets by listening at keyholes. Many Senators again protested against anybody giving out a single point in relation to the proceedings, and several declared they would not utter a word unless a unanimous pledge was made that everything said and done be kept an inviolate secret. The Burnside reslution, submitted yesterday, to rescind the action of the former caucus in relation to deferring action on contested nominations, created a lengthy discussion. It was argued pro and con., but it is understood Conkling didn't speak to-day. He had devoted friends in the caucus who watched his interest.

A TEST VOTE AVOIDED.

After considerable debate the caucus appeared ready to vote on the resolution. Ferry, who was in the barber shop getting shaved, was sent for in a hurry to vote and rushed to the caucus scarcely half shaved. Then it was urged from the Conkling side that a vote be not pressed. The indications clearly were that a majority would vote for the resolution. Conkling's friends staved off the vote by protesting against forcing a decision just then.

In all of the discussion a very kind feeling was manifested towards Conkling. Senators who maintained that Robertson ought to be confirmed, and declared their intention to vote that way, expressed regret that it was necessary to antagonize Conkling, who was part of the time absent from the caucus and in his committee room. A general disposition was manifested to avoid putting any humiliations upon Conkling in confirming Robertson.

It is clearer than ever that Robertson will be confirmed, though the delay of the Republican caucus will doubtless postpone his case until next week.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—It was stated yesterday, in extenuation of much of the aggressive course of Senator Conkling, that he was often placed in the position of opposition to the Executive by the importunities and clamor of his friends; that naturally he would seek a controversy, but his friends, finding objection for divers reasons to certain men in the State the moment they are recognized, set up such a commotion that the Senator has but one course to pursue, and that to gratify their wishes. It is evident from the Senators that there is a much bitter feeling existing within the lines of the party than when this contest first began, and there are now reasonable prospects that the matter at issue will be fought out on broad grounds, and will result in more harmonious action in the future. The desire of every Republican Senator is to let Conkling down as easily as possible. They do not desire to humiliate him by defeat, nor do they propose to take up a controversy with the President. It is believed to-day that in a few days matters will be at such a point that it will be possible to go on with the nominations

MATTHEWS' NOMINATION.

Most of the time in executive session yesterday was consumed in discussing the Stanley Matthews nomination without result. It is stated that from present appearances the discussion will last for several days. Governor Foster, who is here in the interest of Matthews, claims to have forty-two Senators pledged to his support. This would be sufficient to confirm him. The opinion of such men as Edmunds and Conkling and prominent Democrats do not accord with this array of strength.

CHANDLER DISCUSSED.

The Senate Judiciary Committee had a long discussion over the Chandler nomination, which excited so much feeling as to defer action until the combustable material already disturbing the serenity of the Senate has been disposed of.

THE PITTSBURGH COLLECTORSHIPS.

The gentlemen representing the press of Pittsburgh who came here in the interest of Mr. Case for Collector of Internal Revenue returned home last night. They were received with every mark of consideration by Senators Cameron and Mitchell, and also at the executive mansion. They visited the Capitol and Departments, and had a pleasant interview at headquarters, they feel confident of the success of their mission.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The President has been advised by friends to take cognizance of the sweeping review of certain occurrences preceeding his election, and which he states have been distorted and misconstrued. The elaborate publication of the statements, traceable to Senator Conkling's confidential friends, and believed to be inspired by the Senator himself, it is thought demands some notice. The President seems, however, disinclined to be drawn into a newspaper controversy and may speak through some of his friends. The President says that all his intercourse with Mr. Conkling was frank and sincere, and designed to promote his interest while promoting those of the party. As far as the assertion of promises is concerned the President has said to his friends that he made no specific promises, but went to New York at the suggestion of party leaders for the purpose of conferring upon the details of the campaign and the best means of promoting its success, but as for any dickering he engaged in nothing of the kind, but like all other Republicans he was anxious for the success of the party and ready to adopt any honorable means to that end. Confidential friends of the President say that if all the facts were known, and they will be made so if forced upon the President, Mr. Conkling would not appear in a very enviable light. The publication has only added bitterness to strife and made harmony between the President and Mr. Conkling less possible.

Matthews runs the Gauntlet.

The Senate spent four hours in executive session yesterday, most of the time being occupied upon the Matthews nomination. Senators Edmunds and Logan spoke in opposition on the same ground taken in the discussion last session—his connection with important railroad cases. Senator Sherman made a very trocible defense, showing the weakness of such an argument, and declaring the best tribute to his fitness for the place was the fact that he was counsel in such great litigation. It was the determination to take a vote to-day; accordingly after 5 o'clock that point was reached, resulting in one majority for confirmation, the vote standing 22 yeas, 21 nays.

Another Caucus.

It is generally thought another caucus will be held to-day. The Senators want to have the case decided. At the last caucus Edmunds' resolution that only pending nominations to fill vacancies be considered was voted down by 21 to 11. A number of Senators did not vote, being just then away, but they were opposed to it. Edmunds was then allowed to withdraw it. This is supposed to be a test of Conkling's strength. Dawes says the administration will be supported by four to one, and Robertson be confirmed by a three-fourths vote.

Chandler's Case.

Chandler's nomination will be taken up to-day. The Judiciary Committee will report adversely to him, but a minority report will be made in his favor. All the New England Senators support him, and all the Democrats oppose him. Mahone and Don Cameron have also declared against him, and their votes with the Democrats, will reject him. Chandler's friends say if he is rejected it will make him the most popular Republican in New Hampshire and will elect him to the United States Senate.

Punishing Indian Marauders.

The following telegram was received at the War Department from General Schofield under date of New Orleans.

To Adjutant General, Washington, D C:

Lieutenant Bullis, twenty fourth Infantry, commanding the Seminole scouts, has reported, from camp ten miles below the mouth of Pecos, that on the second at daybreak he struck the Indian camp, killed four bucks and one squaw, captured one boy one wounded squaw and twenty animals. He found various articles of women and children's clothing in the camp and states the party is the one that killed the McLawrin family. No official report has been received, but it is believed to be the family recently murdered in Frio Canon.

Emigrant Ship Sunk.

DUBLIN, May 13.—A report was current at Tuam to-day that the emigrant ship which left Galway last week sunk with all on board.

The Royal Wedding.

VIENNA, May 10.—The festivities over the marriage of Rudolph and Stephanie continue. A splendid state ball was given at Hofburg last night. The Emperor and imperial family, the King and Queen of the Belgiums, many foreign princes, Rudolph and Stephanie and the diplomatic corps were present.

A Parricide Admitted as a Lawyer.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 12.—Among the applicants for admission to the State bar at Ithaca last week, and successfully passed their examination, were the son of Speaker Sharp, of the Assembly, and Frank Walworth, who was pardoned out of the State Prison four years ago, where he was serving a sentence for the murder of his father, on the ground that his physical constitution had entirely broken down. Through strong influence soon after his imprisonment, he was transferred to the insane asylum on the ground of insanity. He, however, was considered sufficiently sane to be allowed to wander at his will, and was frequently seen in the company of a gardener attached to the institution named Thompson, who to a considerable extent became his confidential friend. Thompson always smiled when spoken to in regard to the insanity of Walworth, and some very beautiful verses that the latter composed now and then bore out the idea that Thompson knew what he was smiling about.

Still a Rebel.

NEW ORLEANS, May 12.—Jefferson Davis, in his speech at the unveiling of the Jackson statue, said: "From the academic shades of the military institute Jackson went forth to battle for the cause of State's rights, self government and constitutional liberty. He lived for his country, never doubting the justice of his cause, believing it was righteous, and, trusting in it he died, as I live to-day, feeling that the confederacy ought to have succeeded, because it was founded on truth and justice. He gave his life for the whole country and the whole country gave its heart to Jackson."

Assassination Plot Developed.

LONDON, May 12.—A letter from a well informed gentleman in Rome states the police have discovered a plot to assassinate the King of Italy. The suspected person is an Italian recently arrived in Rome, accompanied by a member of the International Society. They are watched by the police.

A Timely Discovery.

ERIE, May 12.—A heavy railroad rail was found chained to the railroad track just before the approach of a heavily laden thro' Lake Shore train, which was stopped just in time to prevent an accident, The perpetrators are unknown.

Didn't Read the Paper.

PITTSBUGH, May 13.—Alfred Marsh an individual from the anthracite coal regions, is the last one who hadn't read the newspapers. He was on his way to Cleveland and met a very agreeable stranger at the Union Depot, yesterday, who was going to the same city—via of the same back door. The agreeable stranger being a merchant, and having a car load of goods upon which the freight must be paid, suddenly discovered that he had nothing in his pocket except a $500 check—it will happen that way some times. Would Marsh loan him $100 taking the check as security? Mr. Marsh hadn't so much money but he was willing to give him $75. Done, and now Marsh wants the $500 check cashed. He will want for awhile.

A Last Resort.

"Don't want to hire an editor, I suppose?" inquired a lean man with big feet, invading the Item sanctum with the air of a man whose shirt is too high in the neck. He was informed that we were just about egotistical enough to really believe that we could run the paper with the present staff, and if a siege was threatened put her through on half rations.

"Well, I don't mind taking a subordinate position, local, for instance," he pursued, keenly eyeing the two herrings and part of a cracker on our table.

"Lots of help in that department,' we replied

"Give us a 'sit' at the case. I don't mind what I do in duil season."

"Well, boss, I'm confoundedly hard up, willing to stoop to any menial service; am half starved; dry as a powderhorn, and so, if you say the word, I'll take the position of paragrapher."—Central City (Neb) Item.

The Catholic Fathers at South Barbara were transporting the natives of the Island St. Nicholas to the mainland. Among them was a mother who discovered that her babe had been left behind. She begged that the ship might be put back, but the captain refused. She leaped into the sea to swim ashore, but as a storm prevailed, they all thought she was drowned.

How to Preserve the Teeth.

The following directions for the care of the teeth have been issued by the medical committee of the national Dental hospital, London:

(1.) The teeth should be cleaned at least once a day, the best time being night—the last thing. For this purpose use a soft brush, on which take a little soap, and then some prepared chalk, brushing up and down and across. There is rarely any objection to the friction causing the gum to bleed slightly.

(2.) Avoid all rough usage of the teeth, such as cracking nuts, biting thread, etc., as by so doing even good, sound teeth may be injured.

(3.) When decay is first observed advice should be sought. It is the stopping in a small hole that is the greatest service, though not unfrequently a large filling preserves the teeth for years.

(4.) It is of the greatest importance that children of four years and upward should have their teeth frequently examined by the dental surgeon, to see that the first set, particularly the back teeth, are not decaying too early, and to have the opportunity of timely treatment for the regulation and preservation of the second set.

(5.) Children should be taught to rinse the mouth night and morning, and to begin the use of the tooth-brush early (likewise the toothpick).

(6.) With regard to the food of children, to those who are old enough whole meal, bread, porridge and milk should be given. This is much more wholesome food than white bread.

(7.) If the foregoing instructions were carried out, comparatively few teeth would have to be extracted.

It Looks Suspicious.

It seems suspicious for a dramatic critic at a play to laugh until his vest buttons rattle off like peas from a pod, be affected to tears until he has to borrow an extra handkerchief to absorb moisture, applaud till he seems to lead an "encore," and then to write a criticism next morning condemning the play as execrable and the actors as worse.

It seems suspicious for a young man to call on the same girl every other evening and on another girl every other evening. It seems as if 'twould be "s'mother evening" with him before a great while.

It seems suspicious for a grocer to put up a sign, "None but dairy butter sold here," when there are a dozen kegs of something or other with the labels scraped off just unloading at his store door.

It seems suspicious for a woman whom you have known since she was a girl as a decidedly freckled specimen, to appear on the streets without a freckle in sight.

It seems suspicious for a restaurant keeper to carefully avoid dining at his own place of business, just for the sake of walking two miles to to dine with his family.

It seems suspicious for a clerk who gets $6 a week salary to appear in a new pair mauve pantaloons and suit to match as least four times a year.

It seems suspicious for a man to bring down a cotton umbrella in the morning and carry home a silk one at night. It also looks like a good trade.—New Haven Register.

The Monkey and the Crab.

A careless assistant to a fishmonger, with a basket of crabs on his arm, took it into his head while passing the monkey's house in the Jardin des Plantes, Paris, the other day, that it would be amusing to give a crab to one of the monkeys which held out its "hand" through the wires of the cage. The animal, we are told, looked at it curiously, then raised it to his mouth. The crab, hitherto inert, now recovered its self-possession, and took hold of the monkey's nose between his large claws. The other with a piercing cry, rushed to the roof of the building, clinging to a cord. It continued to maintain its hold, the monkey frantically endeavoring to tear it away. Weary of the struggle he suspended himself to a bar by the tail, hoping thus to throw off his enemy, the other apes sitting on the ground, looking on with astonishment at the strange spectacle. Suddenly the poor animal became motionless. He was, as an eye-witness suggests, thinking, and his reflections, we are told, were of a melancholy character, as they ended in suicide. He let go the bar to which he had been suspended, and falling head foremost was killed instantly, his nose still in the claws of his persecutor.

TOUGHENING LAMP CHIMNEYS.—A Leipzig journal devoted to glass trade makes the following statement: 'Place your tumblers, lamp chimneys or vessels that you desire to keep from cracking in a kettle filled with cold water, add a little cooking salt, allow the mixture to boil well over a fire and then slowly cool.' Glass treated in this way is said not to crack, even if exposed to very sudden changes of temperature. Chimneys in particular are said to become very durable treated in this way, although the process may be extended to porcelain, stoneware, crockery, etc. The operation is simply one of annealing, and the slower the cooling is performed the more effective will be the work.

An English banker says that the very best class of people in the United States are the rich money lenders of New York city, who have little respect for the average politician and a great regard for the Government.

Dropping the h is an ex-aspirating habit.

Curious Habits.

Great men often fall into curious habits, which they find it impossible to conquer. Augustus Hare, one of the ripest scholars in the English pulpit, and a refined gentleman, when he had ended a train of hard thinking, would spin around on his heel a few seconds and then resume work again.

Neander, the famous church historian, could not lecture to his students unless he had a goosequill to pull to pieces as he talked, and it was necessary to supply a second quill when the first was completely stripped.

William Wilberforce became so absorbed in conversation in evening companies as wholly to forget himself. He would lift himself from his chair in his earnestness, move forward a little, and gradually approach perilously near to the edge. It was a tradition in fashionable English circles that he had fallen several times to the floor. But in families where he was loved it was the custom to station one of the older children behind his chair to move it forward as he moved and guard him against peril. Some who afterward became leaders in English society retained among the pleasantest memories of their childhood the recollection of the services rendered to this brilliant and eloquent converser.

In The Turkish.

Just now a fashionable diversion for girls is the hot bath—the Russian, Turkish, and other forms of parboiling the human flesh. The girls of New York have apparently just discovered these places of torture, and are rushing into them to a degree that has caused an extention of the hours "for women only." They uncover themselves before one another with a freedom which would be considered indecent if the thing wasn't in high vogue. I can conceive how a Venus in shape could like to stand all but nude before the gaze of her own sex but there is no such excuse for the majority of us, who are either two fat or two lean to be pleasing without the kindly shaping of clothes. Besides, where is the fun of being laid on a marble slab, and scrubbed, kneaded, slapped and dented from head to foot by a woman so stalwart that one can't quite get rid of the suspicion that she is a man in disguise? It is the practice now for a party of friends, ladies and gentlemen, to engage a bathing-house for a certain hour exclusively. On these occasions the style of dress varies. Sometimes it consists of a gossamer waist and tiny skirt; sometimes of absolutely nothing but a blush of innocence.

THE Pacific States have long been at enmity with the small coin, but hard times have been made an improvement. Formerly everything was sold by the bit's worth. A bit was supposed to mean twelve and a half cents. You bought a bit's worth of your grocer and handed him a quarter. He gave you back ten cents. The next time you paid him only the dime he probably spoke to you about it. Two bits are a quarter of a dollar. It was cheapest to buy two bits' or four bits' worth of anything. Hard times brought the five cent piece. A child who wanted a cent's worth of peanuts was put to great distress. The Pacific coast is rapidly approaching the time when a rich man will find cents in his vest pocket.

The story that Miss Minnie Rail, a charming young lady of Keokuk, Ia., was hugged to death by her lover in his ecstacy at her having consented to marry him, is denied by the doctors, who say she died of heart disease, which was stimulated into fatal action by the intense happiness of the moment. The doctors are probably right, but even were it otherwise, there is no use in citing the case as a warning to other girls. Most of them are physically sound about the heart, and will take the chances of being crushed by any man who ever bore arms.

A very sad case of accidental poisoning occurred recently in Chicago, the victim being Mabel Heaford, the 2 year-old daughter and only child of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Heaford. Mrs. Heaford was packing her trunk preparatory to leaving the city, and left a paper containing strychnine in the bottom of it. Mabel was playing in the room, and during her mother's absence found the paper and swallowed a portion of the strychnine. She was discovered shortly after, and died in twenty minutes in great agony.

EDITOR'S TABLE.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE for June—the beginning of the Sixty-third Volume—is a brilliant Number. It is not more attractive from the artist's point of view than it is impressive in a literary sense: having contributions from the best writers in every one of the many fields covered by its contents

Samuel Adams Drake contributes the first of his promised series of papers on the White Mountains which is beautifully illustrated by WILLIAM HAMILTON GIBSON.

Mrs. Sara A Hubbard contributes a paper on our humming-birds, with charming illustrations by J. C. BEARD.

William Winter contributes a timely and excellent sketch of Edwin Booth, which is accompanied by a firstrate portrait.

Mrs. Lizzie W. Champney writes about Lisbon, which is illustrated by her husband's drawings. This is the first of a series of papers on Portugal.

Mr. Abbey contributes a very impressive full-page illustration of Herrick's poem, "The Mad Maydes Songe."

Amelia E. Barr is the author of an interesting article on the "Ballads and Ballad Music Illustrating Shakspeare," illustrated by Abbey—a paper showing careful study, and rendered especially valuable by the number of musical scores accompanying the ballads.

Lugi Monti contributes a brief article on one of the most promising of young Italian sculptors—Benedetto Civiletti—with a portrait, and illustrations of two of his works—the "Figure of Dante" and "Canaris at Scio."

James Parton contributes a curiously interesting article on the Trial of Jeanne Darc. The principal illustration of the article is an excellent engraving, by Smithwick and French, of Bastian Le Page's celebrated painting.

Edward Atkinson gives some important information in a brief paper, entitled "Kentucky Farms.

Saxe Holm contributes a love-story, and the serial novels by Mr. Hardy and Miss Woolson are continued.

Paul Hayne contributes a poem, "The Dead Child and the Mocking-Bird;" and Will Carleton, the author of Farm Ballads, a poem of considerable length, entitled "The First Settler's Story"—illustrated by Frost. Both poems are of the pathetic order. Will Carleton has never written anything better than "The First Settler's Story."

The Editorial Departments are well sustained.

THE British Quarterly Review for April has just been republished by the Leonard Scott Publishing Co., 41 Barclay street, N. Y. We briefly note the contents:

I. "Congregationalism.' A reply to some of the objections against Congregationalism contending that the affairs of the church are the affairs of every member of the church.

II. "Salmon Fisheries." Their present condition in England and Ireland

III. "The Masora." Theological students will find here an account of the labors of the Masorets, principally with reference to the punctuation, vowel system, and accents of the text of the Old Testament.

IV. "Mr. Hardy's Novels." A favorable review with many pleasant extracts.

V. "Schliemann's Ilios.' The reviewer is somewhat skeptical on the subject of the supposed site of Troy, and of an historical Homer.

VI. "The Bane of English Architecture."

VII. "The Irish Land Question."

VIII. "Independency and the State."

IX. "Contemporary Literature." Brief reviews of all the principal new publications of the quarter.

This Review is one of the series republished by the above named Company, by special arrangement with the English publishers. The others are the London Quarterly, the Edinburgh and the Westminster. These publications represent the highest class of periodical literature, and keep their readers well posted in the results of modern thought, discovery, experiment, and achievement. Their popularity is attested by the frequent extracts which form the staple of others' publications; but here we have the far more satisfactory presentation of the originals in complete forms.

The periodicals reprinted by The Leonard Scott Publishing Co. (41 Barclay Street, N. Y.) are as follows: The London Quarterly, Edinburgh, Westminster, and British Quarterly Reviews, and Blackwood's Magazine. Price, $4 a year for any one, or $15 for all, and the postage is prepaid by the Publishers.

THE ILLUSTRATED SCIENTIFIC NEWS for May is before us, looking handsomer, if possible, than any of the preceding issues. Since its change of publishers last January, this magazine has improved with each succeeding number. The present issue of the Illustrated Scientific News is overflowing with handsome engravings and interesting and instructive matter.

Among the various subjects illustrated in this issue is a superb specimen of cut-glass ware; an exhaustive article on asphaltum and its use in streets and pavements; a new and ingenious hand-car, shown in operation; a new steel steamer for use in shallow rivers; the new Jobert telescope, and an interesting paper on physics without apparatus, also fully illustrated.

Every number contains thirty-two pages full of engravings of novelties in science and the useful arts. To be had of all news dealers, or by mail of the publishers MUNN & Co., 37 Park Row, New York, at $1. 50 per annum; single copies 15 cents.

Terms, $2.00 per annum in Advance

Local Department.

—The depot received its semi-annual scrubbing out on Saturday.

—But few farmers were in town on Saturday. Busy times in the rural districts now.

—It's about time for the patent medicine man, and his torch, to make his appearance.

—This is the kind of weather that makes the heart of the ice cream man thump with joy.

—Some new machinery and erecting material was received at the car works on Saturday.

—The season in Bellefonte is coming on lively. We saw some fresh peas yesterday—in cans.

—House flies are rolling up their sleeves and preparing to draw war maps in the oleomargarine.

—A bill has been presented in the Senate appropriating $300,000 for the reformatory prison at Huntingdon.

—Seventy-five negroes are working at Pennsylvania Furnace on the Tyrone and Lewisburg railroad extension.

—Mrs. P. G. Meek, wife of the editor of the Watchman, is, we are pleased to learn, slowly recovering from her serious illness.

—Mr. William Temple, of this place, engineer on the Snow Shoe road, has been granted a patent for piston packing.

—The air is fragrant with the odor of tree blossoms, and that huge ash heap on High street nods pleasantly to the passers by.

—There's no law against eating oysters this month. Neither is there any law against dying if the bivalves are too many for you. Fair shake all 'round.

—The speculative insurance agents have begun operations in Huntingdon county. Centre county, we believe, has not yet been invaded by these dealers in human lives.

—Engineer Samuel Rine is kept busy at the water house these times looking after the supply of water. Sam says warm weather means lots of water, and he means to supply the demand.

—The belle of the city was out to church Sunday encased in gorgeous "kaflumery." Her best beaux, it is said, was so flustered over her "tony" appearance that he didn't dare to go near her all day.

—Less see—wasn't something said about a snow storm or a frost that would ruin the country for the 16th of this month? We believe there was, and it looks at this writing as though it might come—not.

—The wife of 'Squire Milliken, at Clintondale, died at her residence in that village on Thursday last. The funeral was held Sunday, and was largely attended by people from all parts of Nittany valley.

—A new straw hat that can be folded up and put in the pocket is one of the novelties.—[Huntingdon Globe. A shirt that wouldn't adhere to the person in warm weather would be a still greater novelty as well as a blessing.

—The temperance meeting in the Court House Sunday, addressed by Mrs. Wittenmeyer was largely attended, considering the condition of the weather. She is an interesting talker, and her address was highly appreciated.

—It cost the people of Bedford county $1,343.12 to hold their last Quarter Session court. The Republican says: "The whole week was taken up with criminal cases, all, or nearly all, of which, in one way or another, grew out of the intemperate use of ardent spirits."

—We have heard several reports concerning a shooting affair which is said to have occurred at Curtin's the early part of last week. All indications seem to show that somebody was shot, but whether by accident or not nobody seems to know. The particulars are shrouded in mystery.

—The Register, of Hollidaysburg, says Samuel Isett has given a sixty day option to the Edgar Thompson Steel Company for his ore bank, about two miles west of Williamsburg, price $40,000, and $1,000 being paid for the option. This is a valuable bed of hematite ore of a superior quality.

—Dr. H. K. Hoy, who recently joined the medical fraternity in this place, performed an important operation, known as circumcision, assisted by Dr. Kirk, on a young son of Mr. Andrew Morrison, on Wednesday. The operation was well performed, and promises good results.

THE SHOOTING AT CURTIN'S.

A Little Surprise Party Between a Burglar and a Clerk.

[From yesterday's Morning News.]

Since our issue of yesterday we have learned some additional particulars concerning the shooting affair at Curtin's Works. It seems that the shooting was the outgrowth of an attempt at burglary, Curtin's store being the scene of the operations. The room immediately over the store is fitted upand used for a sleeping apartment, and on the night of the occurrence—Tuesday of last week—was occupied by a clerk named Bower. About 3 o'clock in the morning he was awakened from his sleep by a strange noise on the outside of the window. A few moments' listening convinced him that some one was trying to force an entrance into his room through the window, and not caring to make anybody's acquaintance in that way, and at such an unusual hour, he possessed himself of a pistol at his disposal and began firing at random through the window. The burglar was considerably taken back at this reception, and lost no time in sliding down the plank which he had erected to enable him to reach the window, and retreated in hot haste. The fact that he was able to flee from the premises in such a lively manner was a great relief to the clerk, who didn't know but that he had killed somebody, and rather thought he had until the fellow took to his heels. When day light put in an appearance spots of blood were found on the window sill and plank, and also on the ground some distance from the building, but whether the rascal was shot or injured himself with some sharp instrument with which he was trying to remove or raise the window is not known. The burglar is generally supposed to have been a tramp, who was not aware of the fact that the store contained an occupant.

—The Rev. Pennypacker is a very plain spoken man. He has a mind of his own, and never fails to express it when occasion requires. Of this fact a number of young folks, we think, were forcibly reminded on Sunday night last, the occasion of Mrs. Wittenmeyer's address in his church, when an incessant stream of brainless and ill-bred youths and giddy girls kept going out and in during almost the entire evening, to the supreme disgust of that portion of the audience who desired to hear what was being said and the great annoyance of the speaker. Mr. Pennypacker's remarks were perfectly in place, but he made a mistake in not coming to the rescue before it had been carried on so long. It's a pitiful sight to see these young folks, whom we should like to call young ladies and gentlemen, attend church to be taught those rudiments of good breeding which they should have learned in their infancy.

—It is said that a couple of young girls, who were suddenly overtaken by the storm Saturday night, rushed into a beer saloon for shelter, not knowing the nature of the establishment. But the klick of glasses and fumes of tobacco smoke soon revealed that to them, and with a smothered shriek they gathered up their skirts and beat a hasty exit. It is hard to tell who was shocked the most, the ladies or the bartender.

—Mr. Samuel Kleckner, who met with a painful accident at Boak's lumber mill, near Snow Shoe, on Tuesday of last week, whereby one of his legs was broken, was brought to this place Saturday on a stretcher, where his family is at present residing. The attending physician pronounces the fracture not a severe one, and thinks the injured man will not be deprived of the use of the member for any great length of time.

—Thunder storm No. 2 of the season put in an appearance here Saturday evening. The storm swept up rather suddenly from the south, and as the streets were lined with promenaders, there was much scampering hither and thither to secure shelter from the drenching rain. The thunder was not very heavy, but the lightning was incessant and of the most brilliant description.

—The Philipsburg Journal says John Ludwig "changed his mind again," and on Tuesday resigned his position in J. M. Hale & Co.'s store in that place and departed for Saginaw, Mich. As John departed for the same destination once or twice before, and always turned up in Bellefonte, we shall not be surprised to see him climbing up High street one of these days.

—When the street-cleaning brigade can find time to attend to it, we suggest that they put in a few hours' work in removing that pile of earth and stone which occupies a prominent position on the north end of Allegheny street. It isn't doing a particle of good there, and besides its removal would greatly improve the appearance of the street.

Straws Show.

A Spring street young lady who attended church services Sunday says that the woman in front of her had on the "horridest looking, trumped up thing of a bonnet she ever laid her eyes on," and that a lady who occupied a seat on her right "had on the same slouchy old basque that she has worn for the last three seasons, and—well, there, it was too frightful for anything." This dear creature also discovered that a prominent male member of the church fell asleep during the sermon, and also found time to figure up the probable cost of a new July outfit, but when she got home she couldn't till who preached to save her gizzard, and wasn't certain what church she had attended. She could give the name of everybody who came in late, but didn't know whether the contribution box had been passed around or not; if a strange lady or gentleman was present she knew it before she had been in the building two minutes, and what they wore, but was unable to say positively whether or no the sermon had been omitted owing to the heat.

"Well, what of it?" some of our readers will say. Sure enough. What of it? echo we. It is something that always was and always will be. But there is just this about it: Fashion moves the world, and so long as this state of affairs exists, its votaries will not suffer to any extent from an attack of religion.

Death Among Horses.

Last week, says the Altoona Tribune, three valuable horses belonging to Adam Focht, who resides near Water street, Huntingdon county, were attacked by a somewhat singular disease which in one instance terminated in the death of the stricken animal, while our informant did not regard the others as entirely out of danger when he saw them. The animals were suddenly taken with choking, palpitation of the heart and other violent symptoms. We learn that some horses belonging to a gentleman named Hileman, residing on the farm adjoining Mr. Focht, had previously been attacked with the same disease, though we did not hear that any of them died. Horses all over the State seem to be suffering from this strange disease, although we have heard of no cases thus far in Bellefonte or vicinity.

—Samuel Moore, a farmer residing about three miles above McAlevy's Fort, Jackson township, had a valuable horse stolen from him, Sunday night last. The animal is a bay, between five and six years old, and was the best horse that Mr. Moore had. Suspicion rests upon a stranger who was seen loafing about the neighborhood on Sunday, and when asked what his business was, or what he wanted, he refused to give any satisfactory answer. The fact that the suspicious character was not seen in that vicinity after the horse was stolen, has caused the public to conclude that he committed the crime, and then left for parts unknown.—[Huntingdon Monitor. It is reported here that the party alluded to above has been seen in Houtzdale and also in Philipsburg, this county, since his operations in Huntingdon county. He may be prowling about in this immediate vicinity, and owners of horse flesh had better be on the look-out.

—Rev. John Palmer, pastor of the A. M. E. church at this place, was united in marriage on Thursday, May 5, at Harrisburg, to Miss Mary Weaver, a niece, we believe, of the Hon. Mr. Langree, late U. S. Minister to Liberia. The happy bride and groom will please accept our congratulations; and we have only to add that it is our hope that the present walk and conversation of this happy couple may be emblematic of their future life.

—We heard of a little episode in which Gen. Weaver figured when he was in this city that would not add any to his popularity as a Presidential candidate.—[Williamsport Bulletin. Why hesitate, then, to disclose the nature of that episode? If the great Greenback warrior has been "giving himself away," so to speak, the dear people should know all about it. Out with it.

—A better variety of produce was offered in market on Saturday than for several weeks past. In addition to butter, eggs, meat, etc., quite a good display was made in vegetables. A few spring chickens were offered, and sold at gilt-edged prices—35 cents being paid for the best. From this time on the curb market will probably grow in importance.

—Norristown Herald item: There is lots of enterprise in this world. A Chicago saloon keeper offers prizes to persons who take the greatest number of drinks at his bar in a given time. And it may not be long before enterprising undertakers offer premiums to families in which there are the largest number of deaths during the green apple and cucumber season.

Blood Hounds on the Rampage.

The Altoona Tribune says: The vicinity of Seventeenth street and Ninth avenue was the scene of considerable excitement Wednesday afternoon on account of the fierce conduct of the five blood hounds connected with Steven's Uncle Tom's Cabin Combination. The men whose daily duty it is to exhibit these ferocious-looking animals, were walking along Seventeenth street, preceeded by the dogs (which were muzzled and chained), when suddenly a cow, which had been quietly browsing on occasional blades of grass found growing along the street, became excited at the sight of the dogs. With head erect, and tail elevated at an angle of forty-five degrees, the frightened cow ran out Seventeenth street at a terrible pace, followed by the furiously barking blood hounds, dragging their keepers along. Over defective board walks, muddy ditches, piles of lumber and debris they went pell mell, never stopping in their mad career until the cow ran into an enclosure and turned upon her pursuers, showing fight, when the breathless keepers of the dogs, by dint of well-directed blows, succeeded in getting the dogs away. Meanwhile the donkey, which was also a part of the street parade, stood quietly at the corner of Seventeenth street and Ninth avenue flopping his immense ears, blinking his eyes and wagging his tail, as if enjoying the fun.

Body Found.

The Sunbury Daily of Friday contains an account of the discovery of the body of W. W. Wilson, son of Samuel Wilson of Pine Station, Clinton county, who was drowned in the river near Sunbury, March 17th. The body was found by two boys who were fishing about half a mile below the dam. His watch and chain, the chain broken, a considerable amount of money, some railroad checks on the Sunbury bank, a bunch of keys with his name on them, and several other articles that identified him beyond all question, were found on his person. All suspicion of foul play is now set at rest, and the inquest returned a verdict of accidental drowning. The body was then conveyed to Sunbury. It was a good deal decomposed, almost all the hair being worn off the head.

Distinguished Visitors.

A party of capitalists, including A. Carnegie, Esq., of the J. Edgar Thompson Steel Works, near Pittsburgh, and who is operating at Pennsylvania Furnace, in this county, and several other prominent gentlemen connected with similar concerns, have been spending several days in this vicinity prospecting the ore fields. The party arrived in town Thursday night from River Hill, and left on mail Friday evening by special car. The gentlemen inspected Valentines' iron works during the day, and visited several tracts of ore land lying on the outskirts of Bellefonte. The true import of this visit we were unable to learn, but knowing ones predict some important transactions in iron interests hereabouts before long.

To Temperance Workers.

At a meeting of the Bellefonte Temperance Union, held on the 12th inst., the following resolution was adopted and ordered to be printed and circulated:

Resolved, That we earnestly urge upon the friends of temperance throughout the county, the necessity of organization in every township for the purpose of sending delegates to the county convention to be held June 9th, for the purpose of placing in nomination two anti-license candidates for the office of Associate Judge. County papers will please copy.

Notice.

Any person knowing of the burial of a soldier in either of the Bellefonte cemeteries within the last year will please report the name of such soldier at once to H. H. Benner, Post Adjutant of Gregg Post, G. A. R., as it is the desire of the Post that no soldier's grave shall go undecked on the 30th of May. The citizens of the town and vicinity are most cordially invited to be present in the Union cemetery on that day at 4 o'clock p. m. to witness the decoration ceremonies.

—The friends of temperance will be pleased to learn that Mrs. Wittenmeyer, the temperance agitator, of Philadelphia, who is at present stopping in town, has concluded to remain this week, during which time she proposes to wage a fierce war against King Alcohol and his army. The lady spoke on temperance in the Methodist church on Sunday night, and her able presentation of the subject created a very favorable impression on the audience.

—Here is a specimen of Colorado poetry: "The evening for her bath of dew is partially undressed; The sun behind a bobtail flush is setting in the West. The planets light the heavens with the flash of their cigars; The sky has put its night shirt on, and buttoned it with stars."

What's a Printer?

A printer, according to a punning exchange, is the most curious being living. Perhaps our readers would like to learn something concerning his wonderful makeup:

"He may have a 'bank' and 'quoins' and not be worth a cent; have 'small caps' and neither have wife nor children. Others may run fast, but he gets along swifter by 'setting' fast. He may be making 'impressions' without eloquence; may use the 'lye' without offending, and still tell the truth; while others cannot stand while they set, he can 'set standing' and do both at the same time; may have to use 'furniture' and yet have no dwelling; may make and put away 'pi' and not see a pie; be a human being and a 'rat' at the same time; may 'press' a good deal and not ask a favor; may handle a 'shooting iron' and know nothing about a cannon, gun or pistol; he may move the 'lever' that moves the world, and yet be so far from the morning globe as a hog upon a mole hill; 'spread sheets' without being a housewife; he may lay his 'form' on the 'bed' and yet be obliged to sleep on the floor; he may use the 'dagger' without shedding blood, and from the earth may handle 'stars;' he may be of a 'rolling' disposition, and still never desire to travel; he can have a 'sheep's foot' and never be deformed; never without a 'case' and knows nothing about law or physic; be always correcting his 'errors' and be growing worse every day; have 'embraces' without ever having the arms of a lass thrown around him; have his 'form locked up' and at the same time be far from the jail, watch house or any other place of confinement; he may be plagued by the 'devil' and not be a Christian of the very best type."

Lumber Operations in Philipsburg.

The Journal of Saturday says that Chester Munson, of that place, has recently purchased the timber on sixteen hundred acres of land belonging to J. N. Casanova, Esq., where he purposes erecting a large water-power saw mill. "It is estimated that the tract will cut about twenty million feet of pine, hemlock and oak lumber. As Mr. Munson is one of the oldest lumbermen in this locality, he will bring to this operation considerable experience and no doubt make it successful. The growing scarcity of timber on or near railway transportation lines, will make this a desirable business operation for the next six or seven years. This timber tract lies distant from Philipsburg between five and six miles, and will require a tramroad of two and one half or three miles to connect with the Morrisdale branch railroad. He will proceed at once in the erection of the mill."

The Fencibles Improving.

The Fencibles are improving rapidly in rifle shooting. Fifteen members of the company indulged in a practice shoot at the Fair Grounds on Saturday, the third trial, and the work accomplished was very creditable. Captain Mullen astonished his men by making a centre shot, and Messrs. Geissinger and VanPelt scored each 20 out of a possible 25. Below is the full score:

Huntingdon "Napples."

Bob Burdette left Huntingdon recently amid the following Babel: "L'aboard," said the dragoman, and with good-byes and pleasant memories of Huntingdon, they sailed away amid a perfect bedlam of—

"Apple! Sapple! Sappals! Sapples! Two for five. Napple, mister? Mister, rapple? Wan tnapple, mister? six for five cents! Fre sheatn nappul; ni seatin napple; seven foranickel! Napple, mister? Mister, wan tnapple? Want smappuls, mister? nine furranickl! Here's you rappuls! ten furrrnickel!"

Verily, Huntingdon is the place of an "napple."

Bellefonters who have passed through Huntingdon on the train know how it is themselves, and can readily appreciate the above.

—A special car, containing Messrs. Charles F. Berwind and Allison White, of the firm of Berwind, White & Co., and others, arrived in town Monday and was taken out to Snow Shoe on the morning train. Judge Mayer and Edmund Blanchard, Esq., joined the party at this place. The object of their visit to Snow Shoe is to inspect operations in that vicinity, and to perfect plans for increasing the company's mining and shipping facilities.

—It required twenty-four cars to transport the merchandise shipped west from this place on Saturday by freight. Of this number ten were loaded with iron ore, six with wheat, four with limestone, one each with lime and iron, and two with miscellaneous freight. This indicates a pretty brisk freight business at this point.

Appreciated Kindness.

Rev. J. M. Palmer and lady highly appreciate the manner in which they were received by the officers and members of St. Paul's Chapel. Mrs. Palmer found her home neatly furnished and decorated, and the rooms filled with the fragrance of lilacs, geraniums and lillies of the valley. A very fine supper awaited them upon their arrival on the 8:40 train, after which elegant refreshments were served. Many of the town ladies gave Mrs. Palmer the right hand pledge of a welcome true to Bellefonte. The lady was greatly surprised when she walked into her dining room early Friday morning and found the many good things donated.

Messrs. A. V. Jackson, G. G. Skinner, J. McDamie and John Brooke composed a part of the reception committee. P.

A New Pipe Line.

An active competition seems to be developing among the pipe line companies. It is understood, says the Williamsport Bulletin, that a pipe line will soon be laid from the oil tanks, opposite Milton, across the river to a point below the nail works, on the line of the Philadelphia and Erie railroad, where loading racks will be put up for the shipment of oil. The racks now in use near Jersey Shore station will probably be taken down and transported to the new point. The pipe will be laid across the river just as soon as the stage of the water will permit. By doing this oil can be shipped by the Philadelphia and Erie just as well as by the Reading road, thus securing the full benefit of the competition.

Broke Her Neck.

A sad and singular accident happened on Monday afternoon to Mrs. Nesbit, a sister-in-law to Hon. A. J. Quigley, whom she was visiting. Mrs. Nesbit and her son had driven from North Point to Hyner to visit another sister, Mrs. Caldwell, and were returning home. By some means, as they were driving along what is known as the "dug road," Mrs. Nesbit fell out of the buggy and broke her neck, from which she died. Mrs. Nesbit is a resident of Chillesquaque, Northumberland county.—[L. H. Journal.

Death's Doings.

Mrs. David Klepper, of Coleville, died at one o'clock Monday morning of intermittent fever. She leaves a husband and seven children. The funeral was held yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Mr. Simon Lyon, formerly of this place, died on Sunday last in Philipsburg, where he had established a meat market but a short time since. His remains were brought to Bellefonte on Monday and interred in the Hebrew cemetery.

—Information is wanted concerning the whereabouts of four little boys who were sitting on the depot platform Friday forenoon sunning themselves, between the hours of ten and eleven o'clock. One was whittling a stick, and the other three were chewing tobacco and, of course, enjoying themselves hugely, when, suddenly, Billy Thomas, who was sitting in the window just above their heads, shot off his nasal apparatus with a terrific "Ash-hoo-o-o-o!" When the smoke cleared the four boys were gone—where nobody knows. A suspender button and a toe nail were picked up on the platform, and fears are entertained that someone was seriously injured by the explosion.

—A live cat was found in a mail bag in Philadelphia the other day, which had come from Cincinnati. Much speculation was indulged in as to how it came there and who shipped it. Very likely it was put in to a-mews the postal clerks along the line.
